When I first learned that this classic five-star book (a collaboration between Buddy and Henry Adler) was going to be revised and that the revised edition would also include a DVD explaining once and for all the correct way that the authors intended the book to be practiced, I was to say the least OVERJOYED. Having studied the Adler system myself, I had long discovered and was frustrated by the sad fact that many of the drum teachers who used the original book had used it wrong. So I eagerly awaited this book and DVD. However, I must say that ever since this DVD first appeared with the revised edition of this great book, I have been a little confused. In the DVD Mr. Mackenzie clearly states that he was a student of Henry Adler. Mr. Mackenzie also leads one to believe that he is now 'letting the secret out' as to exactly how Henry Adler intended people to practice this book. So because of those statements, one would assume that in the DVD Mr. Mackenzie is demonstrating the Henry Adler system of drumming. I know that I assumed this. Not so!!! However, I am writing this because I feel that someone should point out that in this DVD when Mr. Mackenzie demonstrates how to practice this book, there are many things that Mr. Mackenzie does in his demonstrations which DO NOT at all represent the Henry Adler system. I could spend a lot of time here pointing out each and every one, but instead I will just point out one: 'Grace Notes' as used for flams, drags, etc. Henry teaches a very different way of making a grace note than Mr. Mackenzie demonstrates. In fact, in this DVD Mr. Mackenzie actually makes his grace notes exactly how Henry himself said NOT TO MAKE GRACE NOTES!!! I hope that the reader can now appreciate my confusion (and disappointment) upon watching this DVD.
